VOTE IN THE HEALTH DEPARTMENT’S WATER TASTE TEST MAY 7

Help Choose the Best-Tasting Water in Westchester to Mark National Drinking Water Week

(White Plains, NY) – Join Westchester County Executive George Latimer Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. as he casts his vote for the top tap water in Westchester.

Stop by the Westchester County Department of Health’s tap water contest in White Plains between 10 a.m. and 2:20 p.m. to join the judging. Sample water from around the County and vote for the one that tastes the best. Last year’s champion was Yonkers.

Held to highlight the quality of public water supplies during National Drinking Water Week, this year’s blind taste test will take place in front of the Michaelian Office Building, 148 Martine Avenue, White Plains. The water supply with the most votes wins and will compete regionally. The rain date is Wednesday, same time and place.

“This tap water contest is a fun way to remind residents that the county health department works hard year-round to protect this important natural resource,” said Latimer. “Come cast your vote and meet some of the staff who work to assure the quality and safety of our water supply.”

In 1974, Congress first enacted the Safe Drinking Water Act to protect public health by regulating public water systems. The federal Environmental Protection Agency sets legal limits for more than 90 contaminants in public drinking water supplies. These limits, as well as water testing schedules and methods that water systems must follow, are enforced in Westchester by the County Health Department. Water suppliers and the County Health Department sample the public waters routinely, and all contest participants meet all water quality standards. Private wells are unregulated and private well owners are responsible for the safety of their water. Bottled water is regulated by the Food and Drug Administration.
